

Here is a summary of the Rameumptom story from the Book of Mormon, which is found in the Book of Alma, primarily chapter 31.

1. The Zoramites' Apostasy: The story begins with Alma, a chief prophet, learning that a group of Nephites called the Zoramites had separated themselves and fallen into apostasy. They were perverting the ways of the Lord, and Alma was worried their wickedness would lead them to join the Lamanites (the Nephites' enemies).
2. The Mission: Alma gathered a group of missionaries, including Amulek, Zeezrom, and his sons Shiblon and Corianton, to go and preach to the Zoramites in an attempt to reclaim them.
3. The Rameumptom: When they arrived, they discovered the Zoramites' unique and prideful method of worship. In their synagogues, they had built a tall stand, which was called "Rameumptom" (meaning "the holy stand").
4. The Prescribed Prayer: Once a week, the Zoramites would gather. One by one, each person would go to the top of the Rameumptom, stretch their hands toward heaven, and recite the exact same, set prayer.
5. Content of the Prayer: The prayer was not one of humility but of pride and self-congratulation. The key points of their prayer were:
 - They thanked God that they were a "chosen" and "holy" people, set apart from their brethren (the Nephites).
 - They declared that God had "elected" them to be saved, while all others were "elected" to be cast down to hell.
 - They explicitly denied the coming of Christ, stating that the traditions of their brethren were "foolish" and "vain."
 - They thanked God for revealing this "truth" to them.
6. The Aftermath of Worship: After each person had recited the prayer, they would all return home and, as the record states, "never did speak any more of their God until they had assembled themselves together again." They were described as being obsessed with wealth and worldly possessions, adorning themselves with "costly apparel" while persecuting the poor.
7. Alma's Reaction: Alma and his companions were astonished and deeply grieved by this display of "great swelling words" and extreme pride. Alma offered his own heartfelt prayer, expressing sorrow for the Zoramites' blindness and asking for strength and success in reaching the humble among them.

This story serves as a prelude to Alma's famous sermon on faith (comparing the word of God to a seed) and Amulek's sermon on the Atonement of Jesus Christ. These sermons were delivered not to the prideful, rich Zoramites, but to the poor class who had been "cast out" of the synagogues and were forbidden from worshipping.
